ORGANIZED A FOUR-TEAM LEAGUE

The Western Maine Inter-State League comprising Berlin, N. H., Lewiston (Star Taxis), Dixfield and Norway (Twin Towns) was officially launched at a meeting of the managers at Beals Tavern, Saturday afternoon.

Lewiston-Auburn was represented by Frank "Pat" French, manager of the Star Taxis Club; Dixfield sent over manager Harold L. Watson; Farmington came into the council in the evening with H. W. MacBarnell and F. E. Knowlton as representatives. J. Arthur Sullivan of Berlin, N. H., although unable to reach town for the gathering, telephoned his willingness to accept any regulations which he was certain would be fair. He arrived by train about six o'clock and reviewed the situation and went over the meeting with local officials. Hon. B. G. McIntire and Billy White represented the Twin Towns during the session. Bob Shaw arrived late but participated in the after meeting.

Not hearing directly from Farmington, a four-team schedule compiled by Bob Shaw of South Paris was presented, and to close August 21. In case Farmington decided to enter, Sanford or Portland were candidates to make a six-club combination. This proposition was given up as four teams was considered the only logical plan owing to mileage.

After matters had been settled satisfactorily and the meeting adjourned, Farmington representatives arrived. They were unsettled about entering the league and could give no definite information where their Association stood. After a conference, the Farmington delegates decided not to make a fifth team as it would prove a handicap. It is reported, they have signed with the Maine State League.

Each club is limited to twelve players, and not to carry over three pitchers. There is no salary limit. A player is not eligible in league games after July 24 unless he has been with the club at least two weeks. This is to exclude "ringers."

No club under any consideration shall take players away from other clubs in the league. This will be considered a rank violation of good sportsmanship. When a player leaves a team, either by release or voluntary withdrawal, the manager of that team shall notify all other managers in writing of said change. A Board of Conciliation shall decide all important questions in dispute. The board shall include one representative from each Association. In case of deadlock, a fifth member shall be elected by mutual choice to act as chairman and cast the deciding vote. It is confidentially expected this governing body will have little to do for a harmonious season is anticipated.

The Wilson make base ball was adopted as the official sphere. Spit ball, shine ball and other freak delivery manufactured in the pitcher's box is barred. All games shall be played according to schedule unless unavoidably postponed. In case of postponement by rain, the game shall be played as a double header on the next trip. Each team must give a guarantee of $75 to visiting clubs. Double headers count as single game. In case rain, a club traveling by order from its home team is entitled to $50 in the event of postponement.

BASEBALL

N. H. S. 7; Mexico H. S. 5
Norway High School won its ninth consecutive game Saturday afternoon by taking the high school outfit into camp at Mexico. Owing to the unfavorable condition of the field, numerous excusable errors are charged to both teams. Aside from unavoidable misplays the game was fast and considered a good exhibition in spite of handicaps.

Norway secured a quick getaway with three runs in the opening chapter and one in the second. Two more in the fifth and a single tally in the seventh completed the list. Mexico went blank until the third frame when two runs were landed. One in the fourth and a pair in the fifth was the best Mexico could do. Allen replaced Richardson in the box for Norway during the fifth and closed every inning with only three batters up. The summary:

N. H. S. 8; Gardiner H. S. 0
Norway High School set on the shelf its tenth game won, after a struggle with Gardiner High School at the fair grounds Wednesday afternoon. Gardiner has been traveling fast this season, having lost only to Brunswick, Mexico, and Norway. Norway was a hard fought game, but the high school outfit and starts Norway on the course to claim a championship if future games break right.

The largest crowd for the season attended and a live wire cheering section urged the home team to a decisive victory. Dale Allen's pitching was a feature and he came through with 17 strike outs and only 4 hits recorded against his delivery. He also laced out for two sacks. Sim Andrews pulled off his old stunt of connecting for three bases.

Hickey of Gardiner contributed a two base hit. Dale of Gardiner proved a speedy base runner and was regular flash on sprints. Summary:

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

There are days of dizziness;

Spells of headache, languor, backache;

Sometimes rheumatic pains;

Often urinary disorders.

Doan's Pills are especially for kidney ills.

Endorsed in Norway by grateful friends and neighbors.

Ask your neighbor.

Mrs. W. J. Olmstead, 95 Main St., Norway, says: "My kidneys began to give me trouble as they were weak. My back ached so badly I could hardly go through with my housework and everything I undertook to do seemed a drag. I was dizzy and could see star-like spots before my eyes. My feet and ankles swelled. I read about Doan's Pills being good and sent for some. When I had finished taking them, I felt as well as ever. The backache ceased and my kidneys became regulated. I have told a number of people about Doan's."

KEAR FALLS
Memorial Sunday was duly observed at the M. E. church, Rev. A. A. Callahan discoursing most eloquently from the text "And This Day Shall Be Unto for a Memorial." The church was decorated with flowers and the Legion boys marched in a body. They will hold Memorial exercises next Friday in several of the cemeteries and the speakers will be Rev. Mr. Callahan, pastor of the church, and Rev. Hughes of Woodfords, with Hon. O. L. Stanley, chairman.

At the Milliken school the teachers, Miss Sellick and Miss Libby, hold the closing exercises for the term, Tuesday evening. The Junior High, Miss Lord, teacher, gives an entertainment.

Next Sunday morning Professor Mitchell of Bowdoin College will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon to a class of twenty-eight graduates. He will be assisted by Rev. Callahan and there will also be special music for the occasion. Teachers and pupils in all of the schools have done finely and are reserving of the highest praise.

A reception was tendered Friday evening, May 23rd, to Rev. and Mrs. A. A. Callahan. Mr. and Mrs. Percy Cross and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Norton stood in the receiving line and assisted in receiving line. Mr. Sidney B. Stanley gave the address of welcome which was gracefully responded to by Mr. Callahan and fully followed by readings, music and a collation of sandwiches, cake and coffee.

WILSON'S MILLS

Here's The Phonograph That Dares Any Test

Compare the New Edison side by side with any other phonograph—its superior tonal purity will be at once apparent.

And in comparison with the performance of the living artist, the New Edison still more firmly establishes its superiority—it Re-Creates—in all save physical presence, it brings the artists to your fireside.

In the New Edison London Console you will find all these marvelous Re-Creating qualities in a really beautiful cabinet, at a very low price. And, through our Budget Plan, you may distribute payments over a long period.

Come in and hear it today.

There are millions of kitchens which are literally prisons. Three meals a day, 365 days in the year, represents a stupendous work program, yet millions of housewives do it efficiently and uncomplainingly.

But there is a way to lighten the burden of housewives, to improve their cooking, and to make both themselves and their families happier, with more time to play, and to enjoy life.

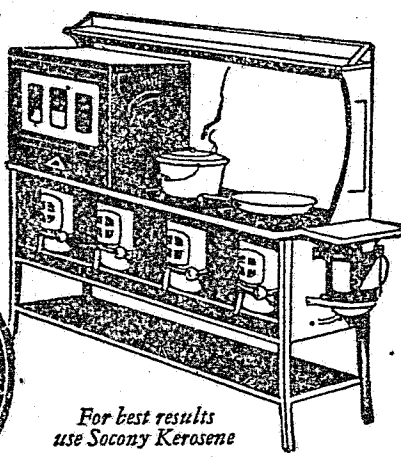

Thousands of housewives have discovered the New Perfection Oil Cookstove, which burns kerosene clean and odorless. It is practically automatic in its operation, ready to cook at the turn of the wick and the touch of a match, delivers wide range of heat—bakes, broils, boils, roasts and toasts. It banishes the dirty coal and wood cookstove with their inevitable dirt and ashes. It adds immeasurably to personal comfort, and makes the kitchen a cool and inviting place.

Your nearest dealer will be glad to demonstrate any style or size in the New Perfection line. Each one, from the famous Blue Chimney to the Giant Superflex, with the fast-as-gas burners, represents the utmost in cooking satisfaction at its price.

STORY OF BY-GONE DAYS

Do you remember the old-time telephone girl and what an accommodating person she used to be? She would tell you where the fire was, give you the time of day, relate the latest bit of news around town, and make her generally useful in any affair that you might mention to her. That was in the infancy of the telephone business when the exchanges had comparatively few subscribers and the operator had more leisure time than now. Such friendliness and chattiness are not possible these days.

The operator today has all she can do to answer her calls and keep subscribers from becoming disagreeably impatient. But we cannot help having a kindly remembrance of the old-time telephone girl.

The above from the Tattler in the Somersworth Free Press reminds of old times when Central would tell the time of day, whether or not the train was late, and sometimes when a neighbor was called, would reply, "Mrs. X went to Concord this morning, and the children are on a picnic." Now she simply says, "They do not answer." But there is a difference.

In the Good? old days one frequently had to ring and ring again, perhaps several times before receiving an answer. And if a call was put to Concord or Lacombe in five minutes it was quick work. And when we did get our party it was almost impossible to understand what was said. Now one can call and Central will say "hold the line," and the Rambler has had his Concord party inside of 30 seconds. And locally he frequently is not able to get the receiver to his ear before Central will answer.

Yes, there were some advantages in horse drawn vehicles over automobiles, in oil lamps over electricity, in walking in the middle of the streets instead of on the sidewalks, but the Rambler prefers to forget those slight things and rejoice in all the modern improvements.

Fifty years ago when it was proposed to build a sidewalk up Prospect street, one old resident said, "All nonsense. I have lived there fifty years and always walked in the street, and that is good enough for other folks."—Transcript Journal, Franklin Falls, N. H.

Club Reunion

One of the most delightful occasions of the past week was a reunion of the F. F. B. Club held at the home of Mrs. Octavia Bean, Tuesday afternoon, May 20. This was in honor of a returned member, Mrs. W. S. Pierce of Norway, who was at her home here for the week. Although a feeling of sadness prevailed the time passed pleasantly and quickly with whist, music and merry sociability, old time singing by the old time choir which for many years were the church choir, gave all a happy pleasure to keep in memory.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, and all enjoyed a happy banquet, jolly toasts being in order. Those present were Mrs. Agnes Howe, Mrs. Fannie Bartlett, Mrs. Lucetta B. Pierce, Mrs. Etta B. Bartlett, Mrs. Octavia B. Bean, Mrs. Mary B. Kimball and Miss Aurilke Bartlett.

MIDDLEMARCH FISHING AND NOTES

Word came by wire Thursday morning, May 8th, that the South Arm of Lower Richardson Lake was clear of ice. Preparations for leaving were immediately made and the wheels began turning for Andover at 10.30. "Reg" Dinsmore, I. W. Waite, G. T. Silver, Walter Smith and the writer. Dinner at Milton's Hotel and a lingering wait for Ed. Coburn of Middlemarch to arrive and report conditions of the Lake Road. He got to Andover about 5 o'clock and said the road was passable. Remained at Andover until the next morning and adding Ted Paine, who "runs the boat" to one road made South Arm and Middlemarch in due time.

Trout and salmon were not so crazy to bite as we were to fish. We made, however, a good catch. Water conditions were not favorable. Dam gates closed and no water in the river except in dead pools but the fish were ready to be fooled. A few responded from each pool: Dam Pool, Harbeck Club, and Inlet at Pond-in-the-River. Some 20 fish were taken and all returned but four which Mr. Silver wished to take home. A few days later he took to Rumford a good string of fish. Later on Mr. Silver with Fred Harriman of Norway returned and had a good catch.

Next, Stowell and party from Dixfield with George Thompson and wife of Andover got a generous number of trout and salmon for one day's fishing. One trout weighing better than five pounds.

Nahum Moore and wife of Bethel with two friends from Providence, R. I., for the time spent fishing had good luck. In fact all here got some fish.

Dr. P. R. Sanford and wife of Fall River, guided by I. W. Waite, and Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner of New York, guided by Reg Dinsmore, have sent out boxes of fish.

A. L. Caddington of Plainfield, N. J., guided by Charles B. Pond has been killing any fish that weighed less than five pounds. He returned several good ones and picked up one trout in the Narrows that weighed 5 1-2 pounds which he promptly killed.

Will Bryant and S. G. Brown of Bethel have been here.

The Club camp at B. Pond has been occupied by John E. Thayer of Lancaster, Mass., Abbott Peterson of Brookline, Mass., and T. P. Temple of Newton, Mass. Mr. Thayer tells us he got only one trout. It was too early. He has been coming here for the past 37 years but has never been so hot before for early fishing. Had heard it was at the best as soon as the ice goes out. He has tried it and will be satisfied to come later in the season next time.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel N. Thayer of Boston are at Middlemarch for the season. They came earlier than usual, as Mr. Thayer is "out of business." They bring a radio equipment which is giving them employment. The Thayers have been here every season for the past 30 years. Marshall Linnell of Magalloway is guide and this is his 27th season with them.

Capt. E. F. Coburn, proprietor of Lakeview Camps, commenced his 31st year here last April. His wife one year less. They now have just a dozen independent camps or log cabins. All are furnished with fireplaces, electric lights and baths.

Dr. C. R. Aldrich and Dr. L. S. Edwards of Brattleboro, Vt., are here. Dr. Aldrich intends opening his usual vacation in this vicinity. Dr. Aldrich has been coming here for the past 25 years and is not an old man yet. He delights in fishing, seldom killing any. He induces the trout or salmon to take his fly and bear his mark until caught by someone who kills to eat or send out to friends. Fred M. Tibbott and wife of Chester, Me., are stopping here. Fred claims the prize on catching big pickerel at the Inlet. He recently got 2 on a fly that weighed 5 1-2 pounds.

Will Morton, the guide, whose legal home is near Paige's Mills in Mechanic Falls and does guiding here says: "After they get the salmon and trout caught out of Pond-in-the-River there will be good pickerel fishing left."

We certainly have some Town Hall in "Musalloway" thus said Marshall Linnell. "It is a big building, a kind of playhouse and feast room, called a town hall. It cost almost $20,000.00 and isn't finished as yet. Big for a plantation with 28 poll tax payers and a valuation less than half a million. I seriously doubt the legality of the transaction in saddling this expense on the plantation."

During our stay at the Dam, 27 fish were taken. The long tailed fly representing a shiner was used. Salmon or trout do not seem to be particular as to the color. Have caught them on red, white, black and yellow streamers. Seventeen salmon were taken and ten trout. The largest salmon weighed 3 1-2 pounds and largest trout 2 1-2 pounds. All of them were marked and returned to the water.

Examined the tail of the fish you catch! If it has a small, round hole punched in it, the fish has been caught by either Dr. Aldrich, Dr. Edward, Fred Tibbott or the writer. More than a hundred fish in the river and pond were marked.

Sigmund Chase of Beaver Camps, West Arm has regained his health. He had a close call. Was in the hospital at Rumford from the middle of last August to February. Submitted to two surgical operations costing $700.00 each, or total $1,400.00. This did not include hospital expenses. He stopped at the Milton House in Andover until ice went out and is now at the West Arm on his old job and is happy and jolly as ever.

Heard at the dam: "Ed Coburn puts from one to eight million trout and salmon into the river every year. He gets 'em over Rangeley way."

The Lakeside Pavilion at Norway will open Saturday, June 7 and run dances every Saturday and Wednesday evening. See ad.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT

Criminal Docket

The following cases have been heard at Rumford:

Richard Crocker pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and larceny. He was represented by Alton C. Wheeler. Sentence reserved.

Louis White charged with liquor nuisance retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty after hearing the state's evidence. Albert Bellevue appeared for him.

Peter Perry, charged with maintaining a liquor nuisance, was tried. The jury went out at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. They were again instructed by Judge Deane and sent out, but reported a disagreement at 6 o'clock. The case will probably be continued until the October term.

The continued case of Irving M. Kallack for rape was tried Friday. This case was brought up at the February term of court. On the fourth day of that term he pleaded not guilty. The court appointed W. G. Conary to defend him, and on the fifth day he pleaded to the plea he had made on the previous day, "by reason of insanity." He was committed to the Maine Hospital in Augusta for observation. At the trial in Rumford he flatly denied the charge, saying it was a "frame up." The jury was out one hour and brought in a verdict of not guilty. This was the first "not guilty" verdict of the session.

Sentences Imposed

Alfred J. McInnis was fined $50 for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Annie Shippen, fined $500 and eight months in jail, with eight months additional for default of fine.

Lewis White, fined $500 with eight months in jail, with eight months additional for default of fine.

John Melanson, fined $600 with five months in jail and six months additional for default of fine.

William Clutter, fined $600 with five months in jail, and six months additional for default of fine.

Leon Roman, four months in jail, for assault and battery.

Richard Proctor, from one to two years in state prison.

William L. Luce, fined $500 with 8 months in jail and eight months additional for default of fine, for nuisance.

John Joseph Bernard, fined $100 and costs with three months in jail, and three months additional for default of fine, for possession of a still.

Anton Somerville, fined $100 with sixty days in jail, and six months additional for default of fine, for manufacture and possession of liquor.

Andover Murder Case

The trial of Leander Thurlow and Mrs. Emma Lufkin of Andover for the murder of an infant girl alleged to have been born January 22 of this year opened Monday. Some time was spent empaneling a traverse jury that comprises W. E. Bartlett of Bethel, foreman; Leslie Simmons of Dixfield; H. L. Walker of Waterville; W. P. McKee, Stove; E. G. Warr of Upton; Clarence Buck, Norway; Lewis A. Hemenway of W. Rumford; J. M. Wilkie, Oxford; W. B. Pillsbury, Rumford; E. J. Barker, Stoneham, and W. H. Packard, Hebron.

The state was represented by County Attorney Hugh Hastings of Fryeburg, who outlined the case to the jury as follows:

"He stated that Leander Thurlow and Mrs. Emma Lufkin went to Andover, where they occupied the house belonging to Charles Smith, then on the afternoon of Jan. 22 Dr. Wallace Somerville was called to the Thurlow home, where he found Mrs. Lufkin about to give birth to a child. He attended Mrs. Lufkin, who gave birth to a female child. Thurlow then told the doctor to keep still about the birth, and was told by Dr. Somerville that he had better take care of the child or he might land in Thomaston. The statement by the physician was made because of the actions of Thurlow around the crib in which the infant was lying. Mrs. Lufkin is said to have stated that it was her 13th child.

On Jan. 24 Dr. Somerville was going to the Thurlow house to see how the mother and child were getting along, but was met by Thurlow who said that the child had died and that Mrs. Lufkin was getting along all right.

Some days later Charles Smith, who was Thurlow's employer told Thurlow that he understood he was a father. Thurlow denied the allegation, and offered to bet $100 that Smith could not find a baby in the house.

Three days later Smith told Thurlow that the birth had been recorded and the respondent denied Smith to find the records. Dr. Somerville had recorded the birth at the town clerk's office. During the first part of April the town clerk went over the records and in checking up the births called at the Thurlow house.

Mrs. Lufkin came to the door and denied having given birth to the child. When asked if she had not said it was her 13th child, she made no reply.

Thurlow is then thought to have learned of the investigation in the morning and moved from Andover to the Barrett house. With the aid of Barrett and his son-in-law Miller, the respondent removed his furniture from the Smith house with the exception of the stove in which the bones were found later. When asked by his lawyers why he did not take the stove, he replied, "To Hell with the stove. It's no good."

The next incident was the arrest of Thurlow and Mrs. Lufkin, and the statement by Thurlow that the child had died and he had buried it in the cellar. After his confession the bones were found in the stove and sent to Bowdoin College to be examined by Dr. Whittier who pronounced them to be those of an infant."

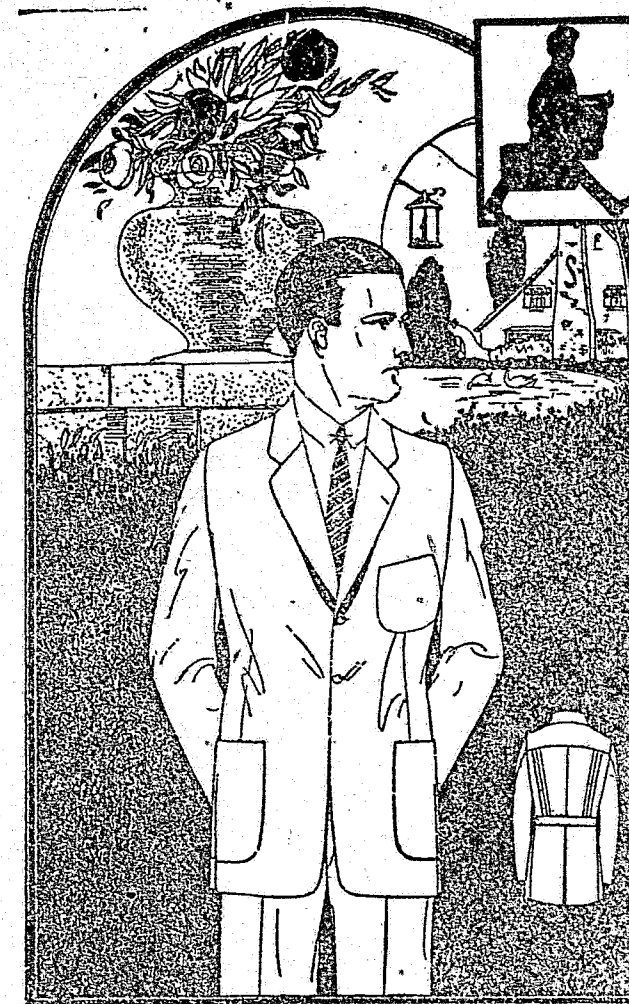

At the conclusion of the outline, the jury, respondents, County Attorney Hastings, and defense counsel visited the Smith house where the bones were found.

SALMON PUT IN SEBAGO LAKE

If anglers who fish the waters of Sebago Lake this season don't have any luck they can't come back with the alibi that there are no fish in the lake, for during the annual visit Tuesday of the Cumberland Fish and Game Association to the hatchery at Raymond, no less than 67,000 salmon, ready to jump at the hook and give the fishermen as tough a battle as he wants to encounter, were liberated into the lake.

A count at the hatchery, previous to the liberation, in a specially devised receptacle created by Superintendent Briggs, disclosed that approximately 70,000 salmon had reached the two-year old stage and of this number 67,000 were liberated. A year ago the count for this class totaled 40,000.

Cuts Better Lasts Longer

You will appreciate the John Deere Mower the moment you see it in action. You will notice particularly its simplicity, its great cutting power and the ease with which it is handled. These advantages, combined with the extra years of service it gives, makes the John Deere a mighty profitable mower investment.

JOHN DEERE MOWER The Mower with the Balanced Gears

The driving gears on the John Deere are balanced—one set offsets the thrust of the other set. This eliminates side wear and strain. This mower transmits maximum power to the high grade carefully-fitted knife—that's why the John Deere does a better job of cutting and pulls lighter.

Another feature—if after years of use, lag develops in the cutter bar, this can be taken out—the bar is aligned by a simple eccentric adjustment. The John Deere handles easily. The bar can be raised high with the foot lever to pass over ordinary obstructions. With the hand lever an extremely high lift can be secured quickly and easily. It's no job to keep the John Deere in good running order. All parts are easily replaced; adjustments easily made—its simplicity is a real feature.

Be sure to see this mower before you buy. It's the best mower we have ever seen.

CORDIALITY TO STRANGERS

A good deal has been said about lack of cordiality to strangers in churches. No doubt much of it is true. It is especially for the old-fashioned New Englander to greet newcomers with effusion; although, once acquainted, the same New Englander makes a real true friend. But there is something to be said on the other side. Often times, the complaining visitor at church doesn't give the regular attendants half a chance to greet him. He may sit in the extreme rear of the auditorium and at the close of the service make a bolt for the door, before anybody can get at him. The visitor ought to meet the people somewhere near half way. Then, too, not everybody is adapted to the hasty meeting of people in a way to make a favorable impression. Fact is not the most common of qualities. One needs to be careful not to do more harm than good, no matter how benevolent one's intentions may be.

Some years ago a minister in a nearby city preached very forcibly about church hospitality and urged all the members of the congregation to take notice of any strangers who might happen to be present and to greet them cordially. One woman took the remarks to heart and determined to obey the injunctions of her pastor. So she singled out a woman sitting near and at the close of the service rushed up, held out her hand and told the visitor how glad she was to see her at church. "Are you a stranger in town?" she asked. "Well, not exactly," replied the supposed stranger. "I've lived here twenty years." You could hardly say that the first attempt of this conscientious woman to follow the advice of the minister really made a ten-

Not yet entirely discouraged, however, this woman made another effort. The next Sunday she observed a neighbor whose countenance looked familiar and whom she concluded she ought to know. Overhearing someone in the neighborhood if she had had a good time, the conclusion was naturally drawn that the neighbor had been away visiting or something of the sort. So our well-disposed woman accosted her, held out her hand and asked the neighbor if she had been away.

"Only for two years," was the answer in a tone of sarcasm which plainly showed that the returned wanderer did not feel that she could have been greatly missed. Not yet to be stumped in her efforts, however, the heroine of the story, in a last desperate plunge to be nice and having a vague idea as to the identity of the woman she was speaking to, inquired how her mother was, only to be informed in still more withering accents that the mother had passed away several years before. Anybody must allow that these experiences were rather calculated to take away the ardor of the earnest one in her attempts to be friendly.

Another woman in the same church addressed a young woman who happened to sit in her pew one Sunday and asked if she were a stranger in town, whereupon it developed that the young woman was a native of the city, that her mother sang in the church choir and that her family was one of the best known in the city. Near-sightedness is responsible really for much that passes for coldness and reserve. As a rule however, it is much better to greet ten people that you do not know than to pass one by whom you ought to recognize. And this applies to contacts on the street or elsewhere, as well as in church.

A spirit of friendliness counts for a whole lot in this world and it costs little or nothing. So don't let these humorous examples of what not to do, discourage you from trying to be nice to everybody.

How a traveling salesman proposed to his wife. "Maggie, my love for you exceeds anything in that particular line."

THE HOUSE ON THE HILL

"A pretty hot day for the first of April, mother," said Lemuel Gerry, who was washing his face and hands at the kitchen sink.

"Yes, if it holds this weather you and your pa have to be in the cook stove out into the back room."

The odor of fried salt pork filled the close kitchen, and Mrs. Gerry looked flushed and tired as she placed a huge dish of potatoes, in their jackets, on the table in the middle of the room, calling on her daughter Aurelia, who was a miss of some fifteen years, to take up the biscuit and put the syrup pitcher on the table. She turned away from the little glass between the windows, where for the last ten minutes, she had been admiring the pretty face reflected from its clear surface.

"Come, hurry," said Lem, "pa and I have had a hard forenoon's work and I'm hungry as a bear."

"Come, Lemuel, we won't wait, and Relia, you set the children up and I'll pour out the tea."

"It's too bad for you to get so he's up, mother," said Lemuel, who was sitting down to eat in his shirt sleeves, "but we shall catch it, probably, with real cold weather before the month's gone."

"What's the reason your pa don't come in?" inquired Mrs. Gerry.

"That makes me think; where have you and your pa been haulin' them stones all the forenoon?"

"Up on the hill," said Lemuel, but he bent his head a little lower as if wishing to conceal his face.

"What for?"

"There's pa comin', ask him, he'll make it plain to you than I can."

But it was some minutes before Mrs. Gerry referred to the matter, then it was brought to her mind by Aurelia's exclamation of her father's looking unusually tired.

"Yes," he said, "haulin' rocks sech a day as this is pretty tough."

"What are you doin' it for?" inquired Mrs. Gerry.

"To stone a sular," he replied.

"Why I thought you intended settin' this house back and buildin' on this spot, but I don't know but I'd as lief go up on the hill, it's awful sightly, though there ain't no trees, and these are so nice and shady. I declare we'll have to set some out up there right away. But what made you decide to go there?"

"I ain't goin' up, leastways not to live, jest yet, but I s'pose I might as well out with the whole story now as any time."

"I don't care late to build for myself this spring, times is so hard, and city folks, you know, are glad to take them old farm houses round here to live in. Now I expect they'd rather have a neat little cottage and pay a good price for it, and I'm agoin' to build 'em one, and next spring we'll have a little more money to put later on our own house. Atkins says it all planned out a piazza, with crinkly gingerbread work round it. He's quite a architect, Atkins is. What do you think, mother?"

Mrs. Gerry had dropped her knife and fork and was staring at him as if he had lost his senses.

"Buildin' on my land, the land my father left me, and not sayin' a word to me about it, and not goin' to build for us this spring? I won't stand it," and, bursting into tears, she rose from the table, went into the little bedroom and shut the door.

"I told ye so, father," said Lem. "I knew jest how she'd feel, when she had her mind made up for our own new house."

Mr. Gerry said not a word, but took his hat and went into the barn, while the children, who had never seen their mother in tears, sat looking at each other in amazement.

Aurelia got up with the cup of tea and followed her mother. "Do drink your tea, mother," she said, her own eyes glistening with tears. "You'll feel better."

She took the cup though her hands were trembling, and said:

"I s'pose I was foolish to give way so, but 'twas so sudden, and I'm all he's up and tired, and I s'posed we was goin' to have our new house right away, but there, Aurelia, you go and get the little boys ready to go back to school, and you go right along with 'em and not touch the dishes. I shall get up by and by."

But she heard Aurelia clear up in the kitchen. She heard Lemuel say: "I told him how it would be, but he thinks his way is the only way," and she arose and went out where they were.

"Then you knew it, Lemuel?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you let me know? He had no right to do it."

"It's no use for me, or for you, to say a word, mother. I found that out long ago, and I've made up my mind to get out of this, and as soon as Bob Ely gets me a chance I'm goin' to Lancaster in the machine shop, for Lecky Bowen has promised to marry me, and I'm goin' to make a home for her. She shall not come here even if father consents to a new house."

"I'm glad for you, Lem, Lecky's a good girl, she's got money in her own right, as I had, and I know you'll never get it away from her as your father got mine! But I'll tell you, O there, I've got to be patient, but it's awful hard."

Why, Lem, I've worked so hard in this little house, and every year he'd say— "Well, next year we'll be out of this and you shall have room enough." Jest think how you children have always had to sleep in the old garret, partitioned off with quilts! It's a shame, with all our money. There he's callin' ye."

"I don't care, let him call a while. I wish, as soon as you can, you would go over and see Lecky."

"I will, my boy. When did she come to this conclusion?"

"Last night."

"O dear, Lem, I've always thought that if I could have a decent house, with a parlor and a spare sleeping room and a black silk dress, I shouldn't want nothin' else."

"You shall have a nice silk to wear at my wedding," said the young man gaily, kissing his mother, "for I shan't be married till I'm a little more forehanded, I tell you."

"Come, Aurelia, it's time you was goin'; make much of your schoolin' for I expect every day your father'll take you out same as he did Lemuel," said Mrs. Gerry.

Then she went to her round of duties. The kitchen floor must be scrubbed, for she had not time in the morning, and after that she was obliged to lie down on the old lounge, which was in one corner of the kitchen, where she gave herself up to bitter thoughts and indulged in another fit of weeping.

It was three o'clock, when the outer door, unceremoniously opened, and

"Aunt" Roxana Going, as she was called, walked in.

"Wal, wal, somethin' new to see you layin' down—don't git up for me, Abner was goin' down to the village and I rode along with him and brought my knittin', because I reckon he'll stay quite a spell. I did want to know what you changed your mind for and was diggin' a sular up on the hill? I allers s'posed you cal'lated to stay here, with a new addition on the front."

"Well, people change their minds sometimes, don't they?"

"Yes, jest Miss Gerry you do look real kind o' peaked. I don't like them red spots on your cheeks. You know all your family died with consumption, Marthy had the gallopin' kind, I remember. Now, look here, you jest get some clover tops and steep 'em and sweeten 'em with honey, that's good for night sweats," said this "Joel's comforter."

Mrs. Gerry rose and replied angrily: "When I am in consumption I'll ask a doctor's advice." Then she went to the stove, kindled a great wood fire and set about preparing cup custards for supper, after which two apple pies were made and set out into the back room to cool. The sky had become clouded and the atmosphere so cold that her efforts were attended with less discomfort than in the morning. But her whole nature was in revolt against the unjust proceedings of her husband, and when, in one of his trips to and from the quarry, he looked in and asked her, half sheepishly, if she wouldn't like to ride down to the village after supper and buy her a new dress, she repelled him by her evident attempts at reconciliation by replying shortly: "No, I've got calico dresses enough."

By six o'clock the rain was falling fast, and Abner, aunt Roxana's son, had hastened from the village to take his mother home, refusing Mrs. Gerry's invitation to stay to supper for which the house cooking had been done. The old lady was inclined to "reek it," as she said, and stay, for she enjoyed going out to tea, and really wanted to know more about the new house on the hill, but she told Abner, somewhat confidentially, "that if ever a woman was plannin' to have her husband marry a second time, Miss Gerry was. For she's so worldly about doin' everything and gettin' ready for the new house, you can't say nothin' but she's but for some other woman," which was in a measure, true, but not in the sense in which she interpreted it.

Mr. Gerry announced after supper that rain or shine, he'd got to go and see some workmen, and that he probably couldn't get back much before ten o'clock.

Mrs. Gerry didn't set up for him, but was glad to be free of the task for a little while without interruption.

Mr. Gerry drove home alone he indulged in soliloquy, something after this fashion: "I'd no idee she was so sot. I think I'm right. She ought to be lookin' out about savin' for old age. We don't know what's comin' to us; but I vum, she's been a good wife, and I s'pose she's 'twas her providence, I'd interceded something to her about it. But Atkins says he knows of a party that he thinks will take it off my hands if I want to sell, and then she shall have her new house and new dress. Bless me, I didn't think she had so much feelin' about clothes till I heard her talkin' to Lemuel; but git up, Fan, we shan't git home tonight."

The old lady was finished in due season, but there seemed to be great difficulty in securing a tenant.

The city people said, who came to look at it, that they didn't want a house to live in in the country, they wanted to live out of doors, and the old farm houses afforded them shelter from the rain and at night, which was all they wanted, so it was no use. At last, before anyone was settled, and the only for the month. Mr. Gerry's disappointment was very great. His wife forebore any allusion to his mistake, nor did she intimate anything regarding their new house. The heat of the summer had been intense, her work was really more than she had strength to do, and she became apparently indifferent to everything but her daily routine of drudgery. Her cough and the pain in her side increased, and Lemuel, in vain, urged her to consult their old family physician. She had recourse to some cough drops, which, as they contained opiates, rendered her comfortable, and her family pleased themselves with the thought that she was getting well.

Joel Gerry had done considerable thinking during the summer and some very profitable conclusions were the result.

About the middle of September, he said: "Lemuel, when are you going to be married?"

As soon as I can earn money enough to buy a home for my wife," promptly replied Lemuel.

"Why, you get as much as I do, your board and clothes."

"But that is not a home for my wife."

"Why, don't you cal'late to live with us?"

"No, sir; I've partly engaged to go to Lancaster to the machine works this winter. I can get good pay, and I shall be very prudent. Lecky has some money, and we mean to have a home of our own."

Mr. Gerry stared at his son as if he had gone suddenly demented. "Well, I don't know as I blame ye."

"I don't mean that my wife shall be a slave, as my mother has always been."

Mr. Gerry winced visibly. "You needn't be so sassy to your elders," he replied, and walked out of the shed. Presently he returned, Lemuel was still grinding the tools which he had been using. "Look here, Lem, what'll you charge a month to work for me? If you go away I can't find anybody that'll look out for my interests as you do, and it will worry your mother to have you go. You set a price and let's settle this thing right up."

It was now Lemuel's turn to look surprised. Mr. Gerry continued: "Your mother ain't very strong. I think that house on the hill come pretty near bein' the death of her, and I'm sorry. I've never said it before, but I'm going to say it to her soon's I can get my pride, humbled a little more. Now, my idee is this: I've got enough laid by, though, moornin' half belongs to your mother, by good rights. You go and get married to Lecky right off and go to keepin' house on the hill, if it suits you. I've got men, settin' out trees up there now, so 'twont be so hot in summer, and I'm goin' to get out the stuff for our new house this fall and winter, so it'll go right up in the spring. I've engaged Jennie Ross to come and work for us, so your mother won't have nothin' to take things easy the rest of the time, or I'll know the reason why."

The young man had turned red and pale by turns. "Father Gerry, is this you? Do you mean it?"

"Course I mean it," answered he, trying to speak carelessly, but his eyes were full of tears. "I ain't goin' to keep old Roxana's tongue waggin' about my killin' my wife and ill-treatin' my family any longer. I s'pose she hain't been far out the way. I don't know what I've been thinkin' about myself."

"Father," interrupted Lemuel, "I want to tackle right up and go and tell Lecky. She said the other day she was good mind to buy the cottage but I wouldn't let her."

"Jo-el," shouted Mrs. Gerry, "is Lem goin' down to the village?"

"No; want anything?"

"Yes, I was goin' to send for some more cough drops."

Joel went in. She was making pies, as usual. He laid his hand on her shoulder. "Louise, I've heard you say that Jennie Ross was the only woman you could ever stand to do your work for you. I've engaged her to come and help this winter, 'cause there's goin' to be a wedding, and a new house in the spring—there'll be new dresses to make for you and Aurelia, a new carpet for the parlor, and so forth."

"Joel Gerry, have you gone clean crazy?"

"No, Louise, I hain't now; I've been, I'll admit, but my reason's kind o' returnin'." While the lamp holds out to burn, ye know."

She turned and went to her place of refuge, the little bedroom, where all her children had been born and where many times in the day she had gone in secret to ask strength and help from the never failing source.

"I think Joel must be goin' to be taken away," she said. "He don't look natural, and he don't seem natural."

Spring came early, and the new house was rapidly approaching completion. The family still occupied the "old part," but Mrs. Gerry spent much time with the newly married couple, who were enjoying the comforts of the house on the hill.

Jennie Ross assumed the care of the housework, and Mrs. Gerry said, that for the first time in her married life of nearly twenty-five years, she had time to fold her hands in peace and quietness. Her cough was somewhat troublesome, but she laughed at all attempts that were made, for her to be under the care of a physician, though aunt Roxana declared that she had the genuine hectic flush. She persisted that it was spring fever; that yellow dock and dandelion bitters would set her up all right. Mrs. Lemuel had made all plans to go to the seashore with her as soon as they should be installed in the new part, which was nearly completed.

One morning she informed Lecky that she knew why she didn't take so much interest in her new home, as she expected, she said it had been kind of revealed to her that Joel was to be taken away. "First, I thought I should be the one to go, but it ain't so, I don't think. It's Joel. He's grooved to be such a saint that I ain't hardly acquainted with him. Think of his buyin' me a new black silk! Taint like him at all."

"Aunt Roxana says she never did see anything like the way the Gerry boys come up lately. She thinks the talk she made up about Father Gerry did some good," said Lecky.

"And she's about right, though she is a meddlesome old thing," answered Mrs. Gerry.

"I've heered that folks always give a party when they move into a new house. I should like to, and I mean to invite aunt Roxana and let her see that I'm alive, and that I can show her as handsome a parlor and as good a husband as they make nowadays. But it does seem strange what makes Joel turn round all to once."

"I had a vision I think," said Joel who had just come in.

"Vision," answered Jennie Ross. "I should think you did. I haven't a good opinion of a man who will say that he has a vision."

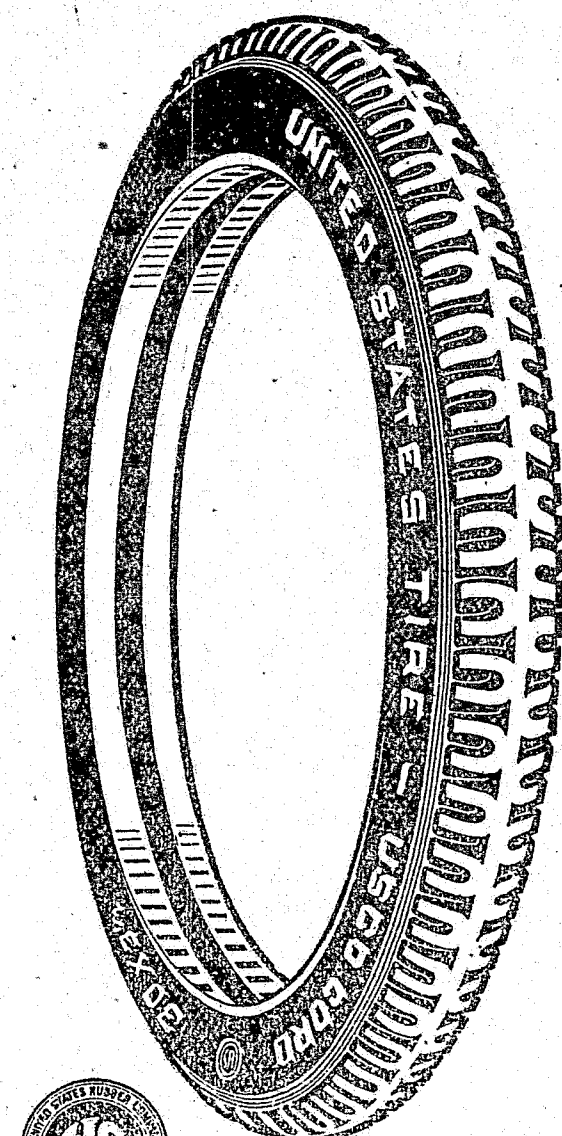

When he begins to think he's in danger of losing her, turn round, so's to keep her. Lecky right off and go to keepin' house on the hill, if it suits you. I've got men, settin' out trees up there now, so 'twont be so hot in summer, and I'm goin' to get out the stuff for our new house this fall and winter, so it'll go right up in the spring. I've engaged Jennie Ross to come and work for us, so your mother won't have nothin' to take things easy the rest of the time, or I'll know the reason why."

The young man had turned red and pale by turns. "Father Gerry, is this you? Do you mean it?"

The Question of Water for Your Country Home

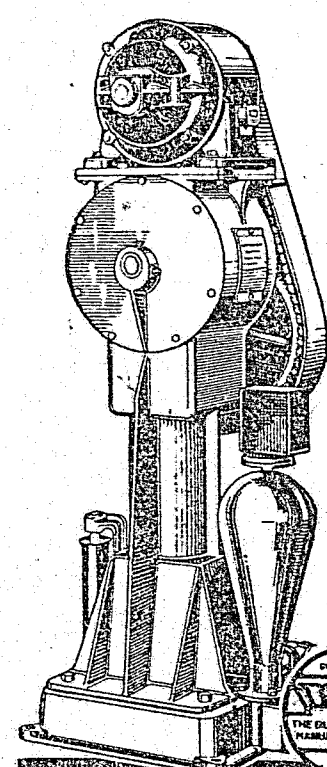

In planning your country home nothing is quite so important as the question of water.

Formerly it was considered sufficient for the farm or country home to have a hand pump or windmill. But now the hand pump and windmill are as obsolete as the old unsanitary outhouse or chemical toilet.

DURO Water Systems

made in many sizes and styles, enable any home anywhere, to have running water under pressure, all over the house, just like city water service.

Duro systems can be used with deep wells, shallow wells, cisterns or springs. They may be driven from high line current, farm light plant or gasoline engine.

A Duro system is a sound investment—it lessens labor and promotes health and cleanliness. It replaces drudgery and despair with comfort and happiness. And it is also a permanent improvement that adds to the value of your property.

Have your architect or builder ask for an estimate. Specify Duro.

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK" TO BE PRESERVED BY MUSEUM.

Because of its educational value pertaining to the history and growth of New York, "Little Old New York," Marion Davies' great film success, has been placed in the archives of the American Museum of Natural History, of New York City.

Directors of the Public Education Department of the Museum, seeking documents, books and pictures recording the history of New York City, discovered that Cosmopolitan's "Little Old New York" was the only film in existence that accurately and faithfully portrays the life manners and customs of New York in the days when Robert Fulton started the world by successfully navigating the Hudson River in the first steamboat, the "Claremont."

BATES—WEST PARIS

The American Flag
The four act drama, "The American Flag," presented last week Wednesday in the Grange Hall for the benefit of the West Paris Public Library, was a great success. All the parts were well selected and played excellently. The seats were all reserved and all but a very few were sold. They took $95 at the door. Following is the cast of characters:

Bob McMillan, a brave young American..... Harry Jacobs
Kommandant Wolf of the enemy's forces..... Sherman Billings
Ignorant, an honest felle..... Howard McKean
Major Marvin, an American officer..... Simeon Farr
June Oliver, an American girl..... Clarence Smith
Madeline, a French girl..... Madeline Berry
Diez McMillan, a little patriot..... Leona Riddle
Roula, a Hungarian..... Frances Perkins
American Soldiers: Guard, Ned Herrick
Others: Reynold Chase, Maynard Chase and Robert Chase.

The drama opened in the first two acts in the exterior of Judge Oliver's home in Northern France. The third act is located in an American camp in France and the fourth act is the same as in the first act. Eighteen months later, Bob is captain of the advance of the Americans and the retreat of the Germans. The plot works out that Kommandant Wolf intends to disown his wife, Rozika, and win the pretty American girl, June Oliver, who is in love with Bob. Bob enters the German lines as a spy and he has a narrow escape. Rozika becomes a nun and finally straightens out the misunderstanding between June and Bob and exposes her false husband's Kommandant Wolf's treachery and he is shot. The honest Israelite is wiser than he seems, helps to untangle and point out the villainy and has a very laughable manner.

The costumes and stage fittings, the distant sounds of war and music go far towards the reality in the life of the play. It has been complimented as the best home talent play of the season.

The cast went to West Summer with the play Monday night and are going to Bryant Pond Memorial Day evening and will accept other engagements.

Church Notes
